Villanova Law Review Launches Online Companion

June 4, 2012

The Villanova Law Review launched its new online companion, Tolle Lege, with the publication of its first student article. Tolle Lege will serve as a companion to the Law Review by publishing shorter articles on recent legal issues, in addition to student works that do not appear in the Law Review’s print version. The website will also serve as source for information on upcoming journal activities, such as symposia, and access to prior print editions of the Law Review. Current journal members will also have access to a members-only page that provides information on current deadlines and other relevant journal information.

Please continue to check back throughout the summer, as staff will be updating the site with additional features.
